City of Nanaimo to require business licences for Short Term Rentals

Summary

New regulations have come into effect for operators of short-term rentals (STR) and bed and breakfasts in the City of Nanaimo. At their meeting on February 7, Council adopted amendments to the zoning and off-street parking bylaw that regulates and permit short-term rentals. Included in the changes is the requirement for a business licence.

The changes come after a review relating to STRs and Bed and Breakfasts Zoning and Business Licence regulations. Through the review, Council confirmed that a business licence will be required for all short-term rental accommodation, including bed and breakfasts.

To help inform prospective STR operators of zoning and bylaw regulations, building and fire safety information, relevant bylaw information (such as the Noise Control Bylaw) and other good neighbour practices, the City has published a Short-Term Rental Operator's Guide. The guide will be available online and at the front counter of the City of Nanaimo's Service and Resource Centre (411 Dunsmuir Street).

Strategic Link: The Short-Term Rental review and operator's guide was a recommendation of the Affordable Housing Strategy; implementing the Affordable Housing Strategy (short-term rentals and adaptable housing regulations) is included in the 2019-2022 Strategic Plan.
